“ We were navigating some very complex issues around residencies and hospital partnerships and needed some high-level technical assistance. That’s what EHCI provided. They understood the dynamics and technical and funding issues, and they developed a good grasp of the personalities in the mix, as well, that helped us through some difficult discussions.

MISSION

To improve healthcare for underserved populations by providing innovative solutions for primary care workforce training partnerships in urban and rural settings.

BACKGROUND

Since 2006 EHCI partners have developed informational resources and sponsored trainings on the Education Health Center model and have assisted health centers in many states take advantage of the federally-funded Teaching Health Center (THC) program.

Research shows that physicians and health professionals trained in health centers are twice as likely to work in underserved settings and four times more likely to work in community health centers.

“ The guidance of EHCI’s consultant, Dr. Kiki Nocella, on the development of a consortium model for medical education and her expertise in grant writing for teaching health centers was instrumental in our successful grant application for a new 30-resident internal medicine program.

Dr. Dale Andres, Senior VP for Medical Affairs & Osteopathic Director of Medical Education, Mercy Medical Center, Des Moines, IA

FEASIBILITY ANALYSIS & PLANNING

EHCI has years of experience helping CHCs develop family medicine residency programs in partnership with area teaching hospitals. We are currently developing expertise with Nurse Practitioner, Dental, and Physician Assistant training programs.

EHCI can help you:

- » Assess organizational capacity, readiness, and resources needed to create desired programs.
- » Develop high-level strategy and action steps.
- » Connect with peer organizations that have similar goals.
- » Identify the most effective operational models to maximize resources and sustainability.

“
Training residents in FQHCs is a great workforce solution for our communities. However, the barriers to forming new training sites are difficult to overcome without assistance. EHCI provides the consultative support—mission, funding, regulations, application, mediation—needed to form new residency training sites in FQHCs.

EXPERIENCED CONSULTANTS WORK ONSITE WITH YOU

No two CHCs have exactly the same needs, resources, or challenges. Our consultants will work with your organization's unique assets and challenges and share insights from successful models in other communities.

Our consultants can help you:

- » Identify critical alliances in your community and help negotiate win-win partnerships.
- » Tailor a business plan to your organization's unique requirements.
- » Assist in writing the ACGME/AOA or THC application, if appropriate.
- » Develop or improve relevant programs and administrative processes for ongoing operations.
- » Assist with smooth integration of training programs with health center operations.

We understand the complexities in establishing educational partnerships and the requirements that education health centers face with their own residencies. We can save time and headaches in sharing expertise and proven models.
